INTERVIEW

Learning From Different TIME ZONE

Article from Interview with Mr. Edwin Mwanza (Media and Communication student with ATAFOM University International).

By Mabas Akila

When considering an online university for your degree programme, have you ever imagined this major challenge – taking your classes in different time zones?

“We are from different countries and with different time zones. There was a time requested if our classes will be done in the morning without realizing that we are from different countries and different time zones. So, it is difficult to set your classes for a particular time of the day because morning here is an afternoon for some people”, says Edwin Mwanza from Zambia, a Media and Communication student with ATAFOM University International.

Are there ways learners can cope with differences in time zone? What possible solutions would an online institution adopt to make learning exciting for its heterogeneous student population? Two things will help in this regard – what the student makes of the situation and what the institution does to make the student feel less stressed about the time zone.

The first thing: a learner who finds him or herself in this learning environment should weigh the advantages and disadvantages of learning in a multicultural setting. Ask yourself some simple quick questions:

- Are you able to gain from the experiences of the diversity in the class population?
- Are you able to contribute positively to others' understanding of your background and culture?

- Would the learned experiences from foreign cultures translate into applicable situations and be a part of the solutions to your instances?

The ATAFOM University International provides the opportunity for this:

Firstly: Edwin Mwanza, like his other colleagues and mates from 12 different countries, have indicated how they are excited about learning what the political terrain in other countries looks like and how other cultures operate. “My interaction with other students in the class who come from different countries however has made me learn about different cultures. We get to hear a lot of stories and a lot of cultures we do not know about. This has broadened my experiences and made them fun-filled”, he explains.

Another student, Haruna Wasinya, studying Information Technology offered more insight about the benefit of this diversity in the classroom. He observes that “Mr. Mwanza from Zambia, has shared with us some political, educational, and religious perspectives from his country. We in Nigeria relate our own experiences as well. We get to realize that there are things we have in common as Africans. In the end, we are able to integrate such ideas and knowledge into our studies. This does not mean we will forsake our cultures, values, and norms; it will only add to what we know and believe.”

Secondly: the online institution should have an organized timetable that takes into cognizance the different time zones of their student. Any online institution that does not do this will fail to strike an equilibrium between the educational and emotional needs of their students.

The Deputy and Director of the Faculty of Information Technology, Anas Jawed, explains that the university is aware of the different lecture times for students and it is in line with this that all the time zones where students are located are harmonized and a conducive timing for all the lectures are scheduled. Each student receives communication using ATAFOM Time and then calculates to fit their time zone. Although this is difficult to achieve, it has worked fairly well for most of the students for now.

This policy is further strengthened by the involvement of diversified faculty members which cuts across 11 countries. The Rector of the ATAFOM University International, Prof. Dr. Michael Bauer revealed that “Lecturers and Professors need to be diverse and learn to respect various cultures and religion, learn and act on the concept of Unity in Diversity by generating harmony and unity between dissimilar individuals or groups. Live the life of ‘unity without uniformity and diversity without fragmentation’. Tolerance of physical, cultural, linguistic, social, religious, political, ideological and/or psychological differences has to be acted by all ATAFOM Academic Staff.”

When you meet a diversified academic and non-staff, a multicultural approach to management and a student population that is willing to make the necessary adjustment to their schedules, learning from different time zones will never be a challenge to your goals.

When you meet a diversified academic and non-staff approach, a multicultural management approach, and a student population that is willing to make the necessary adjustments to their schedules, learning from different time zones will never be a challenge but an asset to achieving your goals.

WORDS OF WISDOM

BETTER BY 1%

We are given chances every day. As soon as we awaken, we can change the world.

We may occasionally feel as though we are moving in the same direction but not forward. We seek the decisive victory or the ultimate success. When we simply think about the eventual goal, we may become discouraged or confused in everyday development. Alternatively, we might experience a sense of defeat and stagnation.

Success occurs when we improve by 1% every day. Is today a day where YOU advanced or regressed?

The same applies in school. Did YOU advance in learning today or move a project along? Being able to get up, do the same thing every day, and stay in the same place is convenient and comfortable. We must consistently complete the little things that don't matter if we want to see progress. Regardless of the aim, it adds up when we strive consistently to get forward.

1%, how are you making improvements each day? There is no requirement that it be the biggest, most amazing, flashy, new, or best fad. Simply make a daily commitment to improving by 1%! You can succeed!

There Are Only Two Times in Life: NOW and TOO LATE

By Comfort Bulus

Words truly do have power. They have the power to hurt people or make someone's day better by providing them with the encouragement they didn't know they were missing. Words have the power to broaden people's perspectives and alter their thinking. People who hear them may be inspired to pursue their aspirations and lead fulfilling lives. All of this is to imply that, just as it is important to be cautious about the words you use to communicate with others, it is also crucial to be thoughtful about the words you consume.

Self-improvement or motivation can be difficult at times. We must try to remember that it is a constant work-in-progress. Your skills and talents have been growing and developing ever since the day you were born. There are only two times in life and each day should be cherished. If you want to make some changes in your life or your entire life, but are unsure of where to begin or, worse yet, how to begin, remember that your past can't harm you if you don't let it. Go forward with the appropriate mindset. Note that perception is projection. Live above the pit that people so frequently fall into and develop or change any behaviour that works or doesn't work for you. Now is the time to navigate your way to a life filled with fulfilment, success, and clarity.

We frequently miss the tiny clues that could lead us to knowledge. This innate intelligence is what is aware of our needs. This inborn knowledge instructs us on how to proceed.

We all experience fear occasionally, but it is so tragic when that fear prevents us from taking any action. This statement does not refer to actual death. It conveys the idea that we all experience death while we are still alive. Being alive is preferable to being among the "living dead"!

Life is full of learning opportunities. It is full of events that teach us knowledge and understanding, but what if they are so painful that we become immobilized in the suffering and fail to advance? The biggest realization I have reached is that I have yet to meet anyone who has led a charmed life, and I am confident that this is true. Every single person I have ever encountered has gone through something in the past that has left them with scars, some of which are more terrible than others. What impact will these events have on their lives? Is the event itself what changed their lives? No! They will live the rest of their lives following how they interpret these experiences. Their turning point will be that. What has happened to us cannot be changed. We can only control how we perceive and react to these situations.

ARTICLE

It is the significance we assign to these outside influences that harm us, not the events or people in our life. You are not harmed by your past. What hurts is the interpretation you give it. If you alter its meaning, your sentiments about previous experiences will also alter since your brain biologically reacts to changes in perception.

You can only be truly courageous when you've faced your fear. You can start to cure yourself by helping other people.

Before the commitment, there is hesitation, the potential to back away, and perpetual inefficiency. There is a fundamental fact about all acts of initiative (and creativity) that many brilliant ideas and plans are snuffed out by ignorance: that when one firmly commits oneself, providence also moves. Different things happen to aid you that would never have happened otherwise. When a decision is made in one's favour, a whole series of things happen, including all kinds of unexpected occurrences, meetings, and material aid that no one could have ever imagined would come their way.

You have the ability to start anything you can imagine or do. Genius, strength, and magic all reside in boldness. Start it today! Although we might not know what your present challenge is, we offer you a place to start, a bright beginning, a firm foundation, a game changer and a new horizon. At ATAFOM University International, our doors are wide open to offer education without borders. An experience of integration awaits you as we provide the best education for a global circle of people regardless of their origin, skin colour, gender and religious denomination. Take advantage of the two times in life, now or too late. With ATAFOM University, it will never be too late for you. Join us today!
